

TONY STRINGER
MANAGING DIRECTOR, SOVEREIGN RATINGS

Tony Stringer is a Managing Director of Fitch Ratings. Based in London, Tony is the Chief Operating Officer of Fitch's global Sovereigns and Supranationals Group. Tony is responsible for providing senior management and analytical support to the Group Head, as well as having responsibility for operational management issues, credit policy, compliance and regulatory issues with respect to the global Sovereigns and Supranationals Group.

Tony relocated to London from Hong Kong in 2010, having led Fitch's Corporate ratings group in the Asia-Pacific region since 2005, where he had overall responsibility for developing the agency's rating activities and coverage in the region.

Having joined the agency in November 2000 as a Director focusing on leveraged credits within the European Telecommunications, Media and Technology (TMT) sector, Tony was appointed head of Fitch's European Leveraged Finance Group in June 2001, leading that team for a period of three years before moving to Tokyo to head up the Japanese Corporate ratings group in June 2004. Prior to this, Tony worked for the Barclays Group since 1985.
